Ada Patterson On the Failure Of a Common Sense Match

AN AMERICAN bridegroom hurried home from Europe, complaining by deed, if not by word that his common sense marriage had miserably failed. What else could he expect?

Three months before he had taken the woman into his confidence about his proposed marriage. He had said that he forgave his bride many former admirers as she would have to forgive him many admirations before the culmination of his life. He had said the marriage would be based upon the firm foundation of common sense.

He returned in a bitter huff, because he was jealous of a quantity he had proposed to ignore, her former admirers, and because she had persuaded him to make over his fortune to her. He had himself lifted the medicine to his lips, then cried because he didn't like its taste. Men are unreasonable creatures.

The woman he proposed to marry didn't love him. She told him so. Yet he followed at her heels as a poodle its owner's footsteps, and she became used to that at first unwelcome sight. There came to her as comes to all women, a weary mood when opposition is overcome by discouragement and indifference. In such mood any woman can be won by the suitor she used to scold about and who has become a habit, even though an unpleasant one. But even in this mood the woman was wary. "I will let you know later," or its equivalent was her reply to his importuning wooing. "When?" he asked and she named a date 60 days hence with the commercial coolness she would show in signing a receipt.

This man had been married before and should have known some fixed facts about women. He should have known that when a woman asks time to think about a man's proposal he may be sure it is for one of two reasons. She is fighting for time to look him up in Dun's or Bradstreet's or she wants to find out whether some other wooer can be brought to the proposing point. Circumstances indicate that the woman was busy in both directions.

The man blindly persisted. He waited one side of the Atlantic while the woman who had dazzled him went to the other. Women have blind faith, but men have blind agony. He remained behind wrapped in the bullet proof mantle of his self esteem and waited. Then came a cablegram in the affirmative and he crossed the sea to claim his too deliberate bride.

Having found out that she used the months of grace he gave her in consulting a former admirer and in plans for securing the conveyance to her of the common sense man's fortune, he comes whining back to lie on his own doorstep and howl disconsolately at the moon.

Again and again what could he expect? The woman who can be persuaded into a marriage about which she is reluctant is weak, and weak women do not make good wives. If a woman can reflect upon marriage for 60 days or 60 months or years and decide to marry at last, she is a cold-hearted woman and cold-hearted women do not make good wives.

The woman who plans the surrender

What Is a Surveyor?

If you mention "surveying" to the average layman the word calls up in his mind either a confused vision of a man with a little telescope on a tripod looking at something another man is holding, or two men dragging a chain along the ground. But what is a surveyor? The truth is there are many kinds of surveying, and consequently the word "surveyor" can be, and is, applied to a wide range of persons. For instance, the engineer with his transit, the miner with his level, the city surveyor with a theodolite, and the mariner with his sextant, are all surveying. And the map maker with his plane table and alidade, is a surveyor, too; the most picturesque of the lot.—Wide World Magazine.

A Wise Photographer.

A photographer who was obliged to move from his old quarters selected a site between a millinery establishment and a beauty parlor.

"A place of that kind is the most profitable location in the world for a photographic studio," he said. "Most women leave the milliner and the hairdresser looking particularly well groomed. While in that state of physical perfection it seems a particularly propitious time to be photographed, and if there is an artist near they step right in and give him a sitting."—New York Press.

Mabel Herbert Urner On the Best New Year's Resolution

LAST New Year's a woman I know made one resolution—only one—and kept it. The result is that in this year she has accomplished more than in any other three years of her life.

And this was her resolution: "To make a detailed program each night of the work to be done the next day—and to follow it conscientiously."

At first she made out her schedule on a daily memorandum pad, crossing off each item as accomplished. But after a few weeks she evolved a better plan.

She took a medium-sized notebook (a diary with two pages for each day is excellent), and the first page she headed: "What I should do tomorrow," the page opposite, "What I have done," and so on through the book.

Every night she would compare what she had done with what she should have done. And whatever was left undone was put down again on the program for the next day.

A Mechanical Incentive.
In this way she was constantly incited to clean up each day's work, to leave nothing to be carried over.

To who have never worked by schedule, if you will begin the year with this plan you will be amazed to find how much more you can accomplish.

If some such discipline could be applied to our everyday life, the results would be astounding.
The time and energy we waste by lack of system is appalling. In a day that is carefully scheduled, over twice as much can be accomplished as on a day that is not. Just try it and see. It is the simplest kind of an experiment and so well worth a trial.

Get the notebook now, and on New Year's day prepare it for the first month's trial, pledging yourself to carry it out for the 30 days. On the first left-hand page write the heading "January 2. What I should do," on the page opposite "January 2. What I have done." On the next two pages write, "January 3," with the same headings, and so on until January 31.

Remember always each day's outline is to be made the night before (not the same morning, that is not so effective.) But the last thing at night, sum up that day's work and make your program for the morrow.

Schedule it in hours or half hours as far as possible, beginning the first thing after breakfast.

When you cannot get through all you have planned, carry whatever is left undone to the next day. But you will learn to avoid this, to clean up each day as you go along.

Make this your New Year's resolution—and keep it. It will be the most profitable one you have ever made.

LIVELY HOLIDAY WEEK AT COLLEGE

Social Event of Week to Be Masquerade Ball Friday Evening.

Agricultural College, N. M., Dec. 28.—The Christmas tree and party at president Garrison's home in honor of the students who remained here was very much appreciated. A number of entertaining games were played, after which the presents were taken from the tree and distributed. Every student received appropriate presents.

Although nearly all the students have left for their homes, there still remain enough of them to have some social enjoyment. The program for the remainder of the week follows:

Wednesday evening, moving pictures; Thursday evening, dormitory dance; Friday evening, masquerade ball in Hadley hall; Saturday evening, basketball game, followed by a watch party.

Rev. L. L. Bloom left Monday overland to Jemez Springs in the northern part of the territory, where he will take charge of a missionary school the first of the new year.

The Owego club members entertained a number of their girl friends at their Christmas dinner.

Miss Bertha Miller, who has been visiting her sister for the past week, left for El Paso Monday morning to take a position in the Y. W. C. A.

REPORT ON RECEIPTS AND EXPENSES OF THE POSTOFFICE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—That postmaster general Hitchcock is determined to put the postoffice department on a self-sustaining basis is evident in the report of the third assistant postmaster general. Though the expenditures for last year are still in excess of the receipts, there is a marked decrease in expenditures compared with a year ago.

The total postal receipts for the fiscal year 1910 aggregated $224,128,657. This is an increase of $20,568,274, or 10.10 percent when compared with those for the preceding year. The expenditures for last year were $229,977,224, an excess over receipts of $5,848,565. To this should be added $22,915, lost by burglary, fire, bad debts, etc., making a total of $5,871,481, a decrease of $11,598,288 when compared with the deficit of the fiscal year 1909.

U. S. NAVAL OFFICER DECLARES FOR BRITAIN; IN TROUBLE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—The case of commander W. M. Sims, of the United States steamer Minnesota who, according to press reports, delivered a distinctly pro-British speech at a banquet at London, December 4, is now in the hands of president Taft.

Rear admiral Murdoch, commanding the third division of the Atlantic fleet, to which the Minnesota is attached, has made a cable reply to secretary Meyer's request, giving the substance of the commander's remarks. Mr. Meyer has referred the matter to the president.

Replying to the welcoming speech of the lord mayor of London, commander Sims, according to the press dispatches, said that speaking for himself, he believed that if the time ever came when the British empire was menaced by an external enemy they might count on every man, every drop of blood, every ship and every dollar of their kindred across the sea.

It is noted that commander Sims was careful to say the sentiments he expressed were only his own personal views, and the point is raised as to how far a naval officer can go in publicly declaring his own opinion when they bear an international aspect.
